

Blended Learning

Learning that works

We all learn in different ways, and there is usually a range of knowledge, job descriptions, and skill sets among learners. So how do we create training that accommodates several different learning styles? By “blending” delivery methods we can develop the best combination of self-paced (online) and instructor-led (classroom) training. This provides learners with many opportunities to access content through media which is convenient and user-friendly.

What is self-paced learning – Training that enables the learner to complete courses (or modules) on their own, without the guidance of an instructor.

What is instructor-led training – Usually refers to traditional classroom training. Instructor-led training is also used in virtual classrooms such as WBT - web-based training and eLearning.

Learning over time

Blended learning is a continuous process, not just a learning event. This provides flexibility with multiple delivery methods and extends the learning over time.

